THE HUAYLLARCOCHA AND MAHUAYPAMPA COMMUNITIES FULL DAY ROUTE

We begin in the back of a van that takes us to the highest point of the tour, the village of Chincho. This is noted archeological site, known for its mixture of Incan and colonial structures.

From this point, we get on our bikes and take rural routes between fields of potato and other grains. Lovely views of the Vilcanota Mountains accompany us as we ride. At Huyapo Lake, we change direction and proceed to the communities of Huayllarcocha and Mahuaypampa, where we have a snack and spend a few minutes seeing the lives of the villagers. From here, we continue our journey to Moray, another significant archaeological site, famous for its concentric terraces built by the Incas. We rest here and have lunch. Then we explore these remarkable terraces, which may have been served as testing center to adapt crops from the valley to higher altitudes or vice versa. In the afternoon, we take a mule track to the colonial town of Maras these five miles are a pleasant fun ride.

From Maras, where we get some refreshments, we go to the Saltpans of Maras, or Kachirakay as they were once called. This is a downhill route, along a narrow path that requires us to use our skills, to take care and give our full attention. Once we get downhill, we only need to ride 5 kilometers on flat terrain to get to the end of the tour.
